

FRV BALI – KABA KABA ESTATE

Edition 11.4 – Dec 14 – Jan 15

Over the past decade, Bali has developed a reputation for having some of the best holiday villas in the world, not only for their opulence, unique style, architecture and facilities, but also for the Balinese people who staff them – for their levels of service and friendliness are second to none.

And just where is the best villa in Bali, you may ask? None on the cliff tops of the Balis, or even the beachfront of Seminyak, but deep in the middle of landlocked fields in the beautiful village of Kaba Kaba, just north of Canggu. It's called the Kaba Kaba Estate, and any one villa owner looking to host it has their work cut out to go higher in either design or opulence.

Laid out generously over more than a hectare of immaculately maintained lawn and garden, the estate has three "wing" housing eight ensuite bedrooms, living and dining areas and ample entertainment space.

Designed to create a distinct atmosphere for its guests, each wing has its own swimming pool services and dining rooms, but all with easy access to the central living and dining area next to the main pool, which is the nerve of the villa and its social hub.

The villa is adorned with an impressive collection of Asian antique metal inlaid with bits of contemporary painting and sculpture from the current private collection. Spread across every room these make the villa an art gallery unto itself, with many well-known Asian artists represented.

The garden has to be the massive stone wall serving as a backdrop, but also the Hindu epic, the Ramayana, by sculptor Rihard North-Lewis, which takes pride of place in the entrance way.

The massive stone is a world away itself.

The way of factors of the villa is brought home by the abundance of facilities provided, in that every area you think of something you want to do, it's there in the house for you.

There's a gym, tennis court, a games room with all manner of electronic and analogue entertainment, a spa, a library, croquet lawn and a Moroccan themed home cinema, and loads of more and games for kids.

There's also a rooftop event space with a covered bar and for sunset sattes and cocktail parties. With facilities and space such as this, it's no surprise that Kaba Kaba is in heavy demand for weddings, with six dozen venues for 200 people an easy ask.

If you want to experience some local culture, there's more to be a ceremony taking place in Kaba Kaba Village, and if it's Balinese countryside you are looking for, well it's right there over the fence, just take a walk or grab a bicycle and head off and lose yourself!

All that aside, it is the local character who make the Bali experience so unique, and the team of staff at Kaba Kaba are among the best in the hospitality field today. Hand picked and trained to the highest standards, they never sleep a beat in ensuring that their guests enjoy the best experience the Balis has to offer. Thanks to them, everything from the genuine smiles of the villa's private chef to the drink mixing abilities of the barista, the smiling hands of the maids, and the wondrous eyes of the security team, your stay will be exceptional.

Over the past decade, Bali has developed a reputation for having some of the best holiday villas in the world, not only for their opulence, unique style, architecture and facilities, but also for the Balinese people who staff them - for their levels of service and friendliness are second to none.

And just where is the best villa in Bali, you may ask? Not on the cliff tops of the Bukit, or even the beachfront of Seminyak, but slap dab in the middle of working rice fields in the beautiful village of Kaba Kaba, just north of Canggu. It's called the Kaba Kaba Estate, and any new villa owner looking to best it has their work cut out to go higher in either design or opulence.

Laid out generously over more than a hectare of immaculately manicured lawn and gardens, the estate has three 'wings' housing eight en-suite bedrooms, living and dining areas and ample entertainment spaces.

Designed to create a distinct separateness for its guests, each wing has its own swimming pool terraces and sitting rooms, but all with easy access to the central living and dining area next to the main pool, which is the nexus of the villa and its social hub.

The villa is adorned with an impressive collection of Asian antiques mixed in with lots of contemporary paintings and sculptures from the owners' private collection. Spread across every room these make the villa an art gallery unto itself with many well-known Asian artists represented. The grandest has to be the massive stone wall caving depicting tales from the Hindu epic, the Ramayana, by sculptor Richard North-Lewis, which takes pride of place in the entrance way.

The 'stay in' factor of the villa is brought home by the abundance of facilities provided, in that every time you think of something you want to do, it's there in the house for you. There's a gym, tennis court, a games room with all manner of electronic and analogue entertainments, a spa, a library, croquet lawn and a Moroccan themed home cinema, and loads of toys and games for kids. There's also a rooftop event space with a covered bar area for sunset soirees and cocktail parties. With facilities and space such as this, it's no surprise that Kaba Kaba is in heavy demand for weddings, with sit down events for 200 people an easy ask.

If you want to experience some local culture, there's sure to be a ceremony taking place in Kaba Kaba village, and if it's Balinese countryside you are looking for, well it's right there over the fence; just take a walk or grab a bicycle and head off and lose yourself.

All that aside, it is the locals themselves who make the Bali experience so unique, and the team of staff at Kaba Kaba are among the best in the hospitality field today. Hand picked and trained to the highest standards, they never skip a beat in ensuring that their guests enjoy the best experience that Bali has to offer. Thanks to them, everything from the gourmet stylings of the villa's private chef to the drink mixing abilities of the butler, the soothing hands of the masseuse, and the watchful eyes of the security team, your stay will be exceptional.
